

Call for Papers

Dominican School of Philosophy and Theology presents:

Dominican Colloquia in Berkeley: Philosophers & Theologians in Conversation

What has Athens to do with Jerusalem?

Dialogue between Philosophy and Theology in the 21st Century
July 16-20, 2014, Berkeley, California

This colloquium, the first in what is planned to be a triennial series on the intersection between philosophy and theology, seeks to continue the venerable Dominican tradition of bringing together philosophers and theologians to explore the theological implications of contemporary work in philosophy, as well as philosophical questions that emerge from theological inquiry. How can recent developments in Analytic, Phenomenological, Thomist, and other schools of thought give new life to the concerns of theology? What current theological themes present challenges or opportunities for philosophy? The theme of this first colloquium is intentionally broad, so as to raise issues for further exploration in the series.

Plenary session presenters include Michael Dodds, OP, Dominican School of Philosophy and Theology, Edward Feser, Pasadena City College, Alfred Freddoso, University of Notre Dame, John O'Callaghan, University of Notre Dame, Michał Paluch, OP, Dominican House of Studies, Krakow, Poland, John Searle, University of California at Berkeley, Robert Sokolowski, Catholic University of America, and Linda Zagzebski, University of Oklahoma.

Presentations should be no more than 20 minutes in length and should pertain to the interface between philosophy and theology, and/or how current developments in one field might affect or challenge the other. Proposals should include a title, a 300-word abstract, the presenter's name, degrees earned, institutional and departmental affiliation, and contact information (including an email address). Proposals must be received by February 1st, 2014, by email (bkromholtz@dspt.edu). Notification of the proposal's acceptance will be returned by March 1, 2014.

Plenary session papers and selected submissions will be published in Nova et Vetera.

Sponsored by the Western Dominican Province, USA.
