Dear Professor/Scholar/Student

The Society for Positive Philosophy and Interdisciplinary Studies (SPPIS), Haryana serving philosophy community in India since 2010. Since its inception, the main objective to do provide best effort to promote philosophical speculation and research in India. In June 2012, we organized our first online session on the theme “The Contribution of Contemporary Indian Philosophy to World Philosophy.” We have received messages from all the quarters of the globe. We are getting regularly the inspiration and appreciation from scholars, institutions and societies and send their best wishes for our all efforts. It is a matter for gratification to know that there is such an amount of good-will for our efforts. In 2014 we are going to organize its second session also. We are inviting you for your contribution in the form of your research paper.

Objective of the Session:

Indian philosophy is the name given to different philosophical thoughts that grew and developed on Indian soil. Philosophy in India has a very ancient origin. In fact, philosophical speculation started in India in the vedic age itself. Freethinking sages of ancient India speculated independently about various fundamental questions relating to human life and its destiny. It also includes philosophical speculations of all thinkers of India, whether ancient or modern. In this session our intention is to see the development of philosophy in India, all periods in general and 21st Century in particular. It may include the development of all schools of Indian philosophy as well as recent trends.

Dr. Desh Raj Sirswal
