Christianity in the Middle East

Special Issue 2026 (SCOPUS-indexed)

Dear Colleagues,

You are invited to submit your original research article to the Christianity in the Middle East - Special Issue 2026. The journal is a SCOPUS-indexed, double-blind, peer-reviewed, open-access, bilingual, international scientific quarterly, published both online and in print.

Welcomed are previously unpublished and ground-breaking manuscripts that have not been submitted elsewhere (6,000–20,000 words, but no more than 40,000 words including tables, footnotes, references, and appendices), in any area, provided they fall within the journal's thematic scope:

- Christianity in the Greater Middle East, including but not limited to Asia, Russia, Palestine, Yemen, Lebanon, Syria, Iraq, Iran/Persia, and Africa;
- Theology and philosophy, Comparative Theology and Philosophy;
- Comparative Abrahamic religions, Denominational studies, Interreligious dialogue;
- Holy Scriptures, Manuscript studies;
- Humanities;
- History, Art history, Archaeology;
- Social and political sciences;
- Religious and secular law, International Law, Human Rights;
- All cognate disciplines.

Manuscript requirements:

- Conformity to recognized international academic styles (Chicago, APA, etc.);
- Error-free text written in fluent academic English or Russian; Prior linguistic review by a native or bilingual expert in the field if the author is not a native or bilingual speaker.

A brief publication format guide is enclosed for your convenience.

TIMELINE:

- 15 September 2025 – The last day for a proposed title and abstract submission: ac.research.uni@protonmail.com (If you missed the proposed title and abstract submission deadline but would like to submit your completed manuscript by the 31 October 2025, contact the guest editor upon your earliest opportunity);
- 31 October 2025 – The last day for a full article submission (DOCX and PDF) to: ac.research.uni@protonmail.com

Please feel free to share this invitation with your colleagues and doctoral students. I look forward to receiving your manuscripts. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to contact me at your convenience.

Very best regards,

Prof. Scott Vitkovic, Ph.D.
