

FOUNDATIONS

CALL FOR PAPERS

2027 Issue · University of Pennsylvania

Foundations is Penn's student-led undergraduate philosophy journal, dedicated to showcasing thoughtful undergraduate philosophy work.

DEADLINE

January 10, 2027

2,500 - 5,000 words · Undergraduate authors

What We're Looking For

Original philosophical essays across traditions and areas of inquiry, including, but not limited to: political philosophy, philosophy of mind, epistemology, metaphysics, philosophy of science, aesthetics, ethics, and the history of philosophy.

Submission Guidelines

Unpublished · Blind review · Not under consideration elsewhere

Required AI-use declaration

SUBMIT → Form here

upennfoundations@gmail.com

Revived in 2026, Foundations provides a venue for students to engage seriously with philosophical questions and contribute their work to a broader intellectual community.

We encourage submissions that demonstrate careful reasoning, clear argumentation, and rich engagement with philosophical ideas.

We are soliciting robust undergraduate papers on a philosophical topic of your choice. Papers should be in the range of 2,500 - 5,000 words. Essays must be unpublished, not in submission elsewhere, and not the work of AI. Authors must be undergraduates at the time of submission.

Please submit your papers via Google Form by January 10, 2027. The form is here.

All submissions must be formatted for blind review. This means that all identifying information should be removed from the paper.

All submissions must include the following statement from the author on the cover page: "No artificial intelligence was used in the research, writing, or editing of the submitted manuscript." The excellence of the undergraduate philosophy essay must come from the relationship between student and paper only. Foundations reserves the right to investigate and reject papers on the basis of AI usage.

If you have questions about Foundations, contact us at: upennfoundations@gmail.com