6-7 April 2018

CALL FOR PAPERS

keynote speakers

Jonathan Buttaci

The Catholic University of America

Alva Noë

University of California, Berkeley

We invite any philosophical papers on the topic of cognition. We welcome a variety of approaches, including interpretations of the work of philosophers from ancient to modern, as well as strictly thematic inquiries on such issues as:

- the nature of consciousness, intentionality, and mental representation
- the way we acquire and process information about the world
- the connection between the mind and the world;
 - the way our cognitive process is justified
 - the phenomenology of cognition
- the influence of science or natural philosophy on theories of cognition
 - the place of emotions in cognition

Submit abstracts of 200-400 words
