IN THE MIDST OF A MODERN WORLD where terror, violence, and the thirst for domination challenge the human capacity for mercy, compassion, and forgiveness, the task of thinking remains oriented towards the promise of emancipation from the manifold forms of fascisms that oppress and suck the life out of human individuals. Gilles Deleuze and Felix Guattari's practice of philosophizing share in this liberatory promise where the immanence of life must take absolute value over and above all dogmatic forms of thought.
