

The Summer Immersion Program in Philosophy at Brown University

July 21 - August 3, 2019

SIPP@Brown is a two-week residential program for undergraduate students who are interested in pursuing a graduate degree in philosophy and who are members of groups that traditionally have been underrepresented groups in the field.

The program features seminars run by Brown faculty, social and educational activities run by Brown graduate students, and a research conference featuring prominent philosophers who are themselves members of traditionally underrepresented groups.

SIPP@Brown provides food and lodging for participants and reimburses up to $500 in travel costs. Participants also receive a $500 stipend.

The application deadline is March 1, 2019.

For more information and an application, visit www.sippatbrown.com.

If you have any questions, feel free to contact the SIPP organizers (sipp@brown.edu).