

Mind, Body, Passion

The 10th New York City Workshop in Early Modern Philosophy

Fordham University, Lincoln Center Campus

Lowenstein Building, 12th Floor Lounge

April 18-19, 2020

Keynote Speakers:

Don Garrett (New York University)

Marleen Rozemond (University of Toronto)

The workshop, which is now in its 10th year, aims to foster exchange and collaboration among scholars, students, and anyone with an interest in Early Modern Philosophy. This year's workshop will focus on the topic of "Mind, Body, Passion" in Early Modern Philosophy (roughly the period from 1600-1800).

We welcome submissions on the conference topic, which may be broadly construed to include mind-body identity, mind-body interaction, embodiment, philosophy of emotion, aesthetics, etc. For consideration, please submit abstracts of 250-300 words to newyorkcityearlymodern@gmail.com no later than December 31, 2019.

Conference Organizers:

Lauren Kopajtic (Fordham University)

Ohad Nachtomy (Bar-Ilan University)

Reed Winegar (Fordham University)
